Emory Law also offers an abundance of academic and community resources including an English Language Specialist. For international students coming to the US for the first time, a foundation program is held in July to help you adjust to the new environment and practice English language skills needed for American law classes. Additionally, LLM students have full access to our Center for Professional Development and Career Strategy and the Emory Library system, which has more than 4.6 million print and electronic volumes.

OUR EXCEPTIONAL FACULTY

Emory Law’s faculty is comprised of leading scholars from around the world who are widely published and renowned for innovative and dynamic teaching. Our professors have unique backgrounds and interests – from pioneering feminism and legal theory, to exploring the intersection of law and religion, to fighting for justice for military combatants and veterans. They come to the classroom with extensive practical experience, having clerked for federal judges and practiced law for the public sector, businesses, and private firms. Plus, our excellent student-faculty ratio of 7 to 1 fosters a culture of openness and collaboration that allows you to receive individual guidance from these brilliant minds. Select faculty include:

Richard D. Perez, Charles Howard Candler Professor of Law, is the recipient of the university’s Scholar/Teacher award. His articles on federal practice and procedure have been featured in leading law journals.

Laurie Blank’s areas of expertise include international humanitarian law, law of armed conflict, international criminal law, and national security law. She works directly with students to provide assistance to international tribunals, non-governmental organizations, and military forces around the world.
