TI:GER® (Technological Innovation: Generating Economic Results) Program Overview,
Room 1B, first floor Gambrell Hall

Nicole Morris, Director and Professor in Practice

Timothy Holbrook, Asa Griggs Candler Professor of Law

This one-year program unites law, economics, management, and science and engineering graduate students in a classroom and research environment. Students navigate the multi-disciplinary process of innovation. This session is recommended for students with intellectual property, patent law, and innovation interests.

Transactional Law Certificate Program Overview, Room 1C, first floor Gambrell Hall

Katherine Koops, Assistant Director and Adjunct Professor

This two-year program prepares students to add value to a transaction from the day they begin working as a “deal lawyer” through participation in a series of hands-on simulation courses, workshops, and seminars. This session is recommended for students with business, corporate, and transactional law interests.

Externships, Room 1D, first floor Gambrell Hall

Sarah Shalf, Director and Administrative Professor of Law

Designed to facilitate a hands-on learning experience, our externship program places students with government agencies, public interest organizations, judges, and corporations in the metro Atlanta area during the fall and spring semesters of their second and third years.

Clinical Program Overview, Room 1E, first floor Gambrell Hall

Melissa Carter, Director of Barton Child Law & Policy Center

Mindy Goldstein, Director of Turner Environmental Law Clinic

Randee Waldman, Director of Barton Juvenile Defender Clinic

Students participate each semester and work on real cases with clients under the guidance of professors and skilled professionals. This session is recommended for students with public service law interests.

Pro Bono, Public Service, and Judicial Clerkship Overview, Room 1F, first floor Gambrell Hall

Rita Sheffey, Assistant Dean for Public Service

Emory Law’s Center for Public Service prepares students for legal careers in the public sector.

Our innovative curriculum includes traditional courses in public interest law as well as a range of topics from international human rights to homelessness. We offer experiences beyond the classroom through clinical programs, our extensive externship program, practice societies, and networking with faculty and alumni who work in the field.

Center for the Study of Law and Religion (CSLR) Overview, Room 114A, first floor Gambrell Hall

Silas Allard 11MTS 11L, Associate Director and Harold J. Berman Senior Fellow in Law & Religion

This world-renowned center is dedicated to studying the religious dimensions of law, the legal dimensions of religion, and the interaction of legal and religious ideas and institutions, norms, and practices. This session is recommended for students interested in interdisciplinary study of law and religion.
