PUBLICATIONS & WORKS IN PROGRESS

I am a regulatory health lawyer and philosopher. My research examines how courts and legislatures respond to vulnerability. My work addresses, from a law and ethics perspective, topics including access to health care services, medical privacy, fragmentation in health care delivery, patient choice, and disability discrimination and accommodation in health care and beyond. I have related interests in genetics and the law, food and drug law, jurisprudence, federalism, and torts. I also write in animal law, where there is a tight connection between animal well-being and human health.
