

EMORY
LAW

Juris Master Degree

Legal training for professionals

Do you have a high-potential employee on your team who would benefit from legal training with direct relevance to their role?

Emory University School of Law's Juris Master program is designed to help employees broaden their knowledge of the law as it relates to their industry, enhancing their skills so they become even more valuable to their employers.

Benefits of the program to your organization

Assess risk and make more informed decisions

Students learn to navigate a wide range of legal matters, from detecting ambiguities in contracts to understanding the potential legal issues associated with privacy and information security systems.

Navigate complex regulatory environments

Professionals must understand the evolving legal and regulatory landscape as it relates to private and public organizations, be able to manage complex deals and transactions, and comply with regulations. The Juris Master program equips employees with the skills necessary to navigate these challenges.

Increase the employee's value

The Juris Master degree provides a comprehensive working knowledge of the employee's chosen field. Graduates can interact with legal counsel and outside parties more efficiently and identify and manage important legal issues.

The JM gives me a deeper understanding and knowledge of dispute resolution, contracts, and regulation. This degree affords me the ability to diversify my skill-set and my career.

KUMAR RAJAMANNAR, 2019 JM GRADUATE

DIRECTOR, REGIONAL HEAD OF COMMERCIAL REAL-ESTATE OPERATIONS, BANK OF AMERICA MERRILL LYNCH

Four concentrations designed for working professionals

- > Business Law and Regulation covers corporate governance and compliance, civil liability for corporations, regulation, legal frameworks for deal making, and transactional due diligence, among other topics.
- > Data, Privacy, and Technology Law covers topics such as privacy, ethics, and the use of artificial intelligence in the workplace; trademark, patent, and copyright law; and licensing and trade secrets.
- > Employment Law / Human Resources explores employment at will, employees versus independent contractors, employee privacy in the workplace, workers' compensation, disability, and discrimination, among other topics.
- > Health Care Law, Policy, and Regulation explores topics related to health care regulation, mental health policy, law and public health, disability, the business of health care, and more.

What is the time commitment for my employee?

The JM is a 30-credit-hour master's degree, available online and in a hybrid format, allowing students to get a degree while they work.

The online format is composed of 10 sequential asynchronous courses, with two synchronous online experiences, and can be completed in as little as 20 months.

If you take most of your courses on campus, you can complete the degree in two sequential semesters or take up to four years.

JM candidates come from various disciplines and professions

Biomedical engineering, research, and leadership

CFOs and other C-suite executives

Clinical research and research administration

Compliance and risk management

Health care IT, security, and infometrics

Health care practitioners

Human resource professionals

Local, state, and federal government employees

Policy development and management

How much does the program cost?

For students enrolled in the part-time, on-campus format or the online format of the JM program, tuition will be charged on a per-credit-hour basis. The tuition rate for 2022-2023 is approximately $2,083 per credit hour, or $25,000 per semester (full-time enrollment).

Scholarships and financial aid are available.

To learn more and speak directly to an admission professional at Emory Law, email jmadmission@emory.edu or call 404.727.6802

"The ability to think analytically, be comfortable with legal concepts, and engage thoughtfully with counsel is an increasingly important advantage, especially in highly regulated industries like higher education and health care. The Juris Master program from Emory Law is an exciting opportunity to develop those skills, while remaining on a complementary career path."

Steve Sencer

*Senior Vice President and General Counsel; Senior Advisor to the President
Emory University*

